The Saint-Jean-Baptiste de Nemours church

The Saint-Jean-Baptiste church was built in 1170 at the request of Gauthier I de Nemours. Destroyed in the fire in the town at the beginning of the 15th century, it was rebuilt from 1445. In 1850 and 1890, the interior of the church was redesigned with the installation of stained glass windows and a high altar in homage to Saint John the Baptist.

The Saint-Mathurin de Larchant church

©SEINE-ET-MARNE ATTRACTIVITÉ

Consecrated to Saint-Mathurin, healer of the mad, this church, built by the builders of the Notre-Dame-de-Paris chapter, was an important stopping point on the Saint-Jacques-de-Compostelle pilgrimage. Built from the 12th to the 16th century, it suffered of a series of catastrophes: fires, looting, storms, collapse of the tower...

The magnificent portal of the Last Judgement, which is very graphic, dates from the 13th century and gives access to the ruined part of the nave. Only the choir, the apse and the chapel of the Virgin have kept their vaults.

The village of Larchant is in the heart of the Commanderie woods near the Eléphant and Dame Jouanne rock climbing sites.

The village of Grez-sur-Loing

This village had an important role in the Middle Ages, as evidenced by the three monuments dating from that period: the Old Bridge, the Ganne tower and the church. A few centuries later, in the 19th century, young artists, mostly foreigners, abandoned the Parisian studios where they studied to go and paint in the field. In search of light, they tried outdoor painting and many people chose to go to Grez for half a century. Thus American, British, Japanese and Scandinavian artistic colonies were created, their French counterparts having preferred the neighboring villages.

The village of Bourron-Marlotte

Thanks to its privileged location on the edge of the forest of Fontainebleau, the village of Bourron-Marlotte attracted many painters, musicians and writers, such as Cézanne, Corot or George Sand. Walking through the streets of the village, the houses reveal their old charm and are reminiscent of the 19th century. In the town hall-museum there are many works by painters who came on vacation or who lived in the village. You can walk in the footsteps of the artists and discover where they lived.
